The Medical Cannabis Conference for older adults is the first event of its type in Canada.

The focus of this educational conference is to empower older adults with current and practical information on how medical cannabis is being used for treating illnesses, particularly diseases associated with aging including chronic pain, anxiety and other mental health issues. Among other goals, the day long event will give attendees an opportunity to learn about scientific research results on cannabis use in older patients. There will be medical discussions on its uses for pain-relief and potential contraindications with other medicines commonly prescribed to older adults. Panel sessions will provide advice by professionals on questions to ask your health care practitioner around prescription, acquiring medical cannabis and about legal ramifications of potential impairment. Additionally, we will be hearing from older adults with lived experience who have found relief from chronic pain conditions as a result of injury and hear about their journey in navigating acquisition of medical cannabis in our current health care system.

The Medical Cannabis Conference will also feature a tradeshow where attendees will be given the opportunity to obtain information on referral agencies, products and accessories. Our goal is to have 25 plus tradeshow participants with products and services targeted to an older audience and those who are interested in medical management of health issues.

Sponsorship opportunities at the Medical Cannabis Conference will provide you with exposure to a niche audience, the fastest growing population of medical cannabis users, who have questions and are looking for guidance in beginning a conversation with their health care provider to empower them in making relevant medical choices that work for them.
